The First Day Doesn't Count.

Almost any sort of a suit looks well when it is first put on, but after a man has worn it a little while and his body has begun to move around in it and the effects of the pressing iron have worn away and dampness begins to play havoc with the fabric, unless the shape of the garments have been wraught into cloth and the cloth has been cut so right that it can't help hanging properly, so that the collar must cling to the neck and the lapels lie firmly against the breast, the original appearance of the clothes will soon be lost.

A well made custom tailored suit will be right in the beginning and stay right in the end.

The clothes we sell are specially made for the body as it is and not as it should be and therefore, when it does begin to settle upon him, there isn't a contest between the figure and the garment.
